MRS. GEORGE SCOTT LEAVES CHARITY GIFTS DAWES.-Mr. and Mrs. Byron Fay Dawe

Among Beneficiaries.

NEWPORT, R. L. Dec. 12 .- The will of the late Mrs. George Scott, which was Leoncavallo's "Zaza" was given at the Metropolitan Opera House last evening for the first time this season. Miss Geraldine Farrar was again the representative of the music hall singer. In this part, when she first assumed it, the popular American soprano achieved one of her greatest successes with the public. It was declared in the first days of excitement over this unique performance that the success of the prima donna was due to her amazing stage business in the first act, and conveysation in the corridors last night appeared to be chiefly concerned with the vital questions of dress and undress.

Tenor Proves Interesting Despite GEN. BULLARD'S WIFE, Limitations of His Voice. ILL TWO YEARS, IS DEAD

Lumbert Murphy, tenor, was formerly a member of the Metropolitan Opera Company, but in recent seasons has con-fined himself entirely to the concert spectator last season exclaimed; "When she vamped him on the sofa it was fierce." But there is more in this scene than acting of a hazardous kind. The first act exposes the utter irresponsibility, the hectic gayety and the sudden flashes of real tenderness of Zaza, and Miss Farrar's real achievement is her excellent treatment of the whole significance of the act.

In the subsequent acts she accomplishes more in the revelation of sincere and laudable feelings. She acts the scene with the child admirably, but the child it is packs, and necessarily with a child's shrill voice. However, it is in this act that Miss Farrar reaches the emotional climax of her Zaza. Last evening, as the trues which Mr. Martinelil's vigorous, singing seems always to excite. Doubtless some hearers wish that he would be at times more moderate in the utterance of his passions and not feel continually impelled to publish his senti-Mrs. Robert Lee Buliard, wife of the commander of the Second Army Corps Area, died yesterday at Governors Island following an illness of two years.
